med ded by the American Ornithode terious Caspar Hauser, who created a grand sensation in E rope between fifty and sixty years ago, is shown up by M. G. Valbert. Dr. Robson Roose tells some things which it is desirable to know about "Intection" and Disinfection." Professor W Preyer, of the University of Jena, defines the "True Aim of Physiology" to be the study of function, which should take the precedence of structure. The Editor's Table is occupied with discussions of "Science and Statesmanship," and "The Growth of Industrialism," and the other departments are quite up to their usual standard of fullness and excellence.

The Cosmopolitan

The Dosmopolisan for April, published by Schlicht & Field Co., Rochester, New York, is unusually excellent, both from an artistic and literary point of view. There is a beautiful frontispiece entitled papers on English Cathedrals, the in-"A Mohammedan at Prayer;" it accompanies Emile Julliard's handsomely illustrated and very attractive article on "Life Beneath the Crscent." The author describes the mosques of Constantinople, marriage and death among the Turks, and Turkish cemeteries. Frank G. Carpenter's article on "Uncle Sam's Bookcase." descriptive of the National Library; the article on Mme de Chevrense, by James Breck Perkins, the author of "France under Richelieu and Maxarin." who describes the dramatic career of a remarkable French woman; Harold Brydge's article on "American Patricians and Plebeians,"—these are among the articles of permanent worth in this number. Noticeable in the fiction is Count Tolstoi's "Exiled to Siberia." "The Baron von Goldstetten," by C. Van Nevelt, and "The Diary of an Honest Man." by Julia K. Wetherill. Lucy C. Lillie's article on "Music-Study" in The Household department, and Katharine B. Foot's story, "The Little Reformers," in the Young Folks' department, should be mentioned especially. The Overland Monthly.

The variety of life and surroundings The variety of life and surroundings in California is curiously evident in the collection of pictures therefrom in the last (April) Overland Monthly. "In a Modern Gold-mining Camp," describes the present condition of the successful and exprision, in a present and representative church buildings, of that period, In a popular paper on the present condition of the successful and exprision, in a popular paper on the first productions, with its beer and for september, 1885.) but the prospective one is somewhat of a novelty to readers in its modern dress. Then Mr. A. S. Hallidie, one of the leading "solid men of San Francisco" at present, writes of his experience among the Eurocal Indians, on the Klamath River, when he was a young civil engineer twenty-five years ago and of the great redwood forest of Northern California; while is bee-ranches and orange orchards. The three sketches together give the stranger some sort of conspectus of the great and varied surface of the State.

The Southern Bivouac.

The Southern Bivonge for April opens with the first paper, by General E. M. Law, on "The Fight for Richmond." Mrs. Patty B. Semple contributes an article on "Sidney Lanier," in which is given a short sketch of his life and a cirrical estimate of his work. A short article repeats what General Jackson said to General W. G. Harding relative to his duel with Dickinson. Henry W. Cleveland has a story which illustrates the devotion of an old slave to his young mistress, and describes a green fland in mistress, and describes a great flood in the Mississippi. P. S. Hunter has a pleasant out-of-door paper on "Virginia Birds." The concluding paper on John Birds." The concluding paper on John Cleves Symmes contains an excelent portrait of the theorist, from a pencil sketch by his brother. In "The Surrender of Fort Donelson," Morton M. Casseday tell how it was that General S. B. Buckner, third in command, was the contained to the contained of the command was the contained of the c S. B. Buckner, third in command, was left to surrender the fort. The article by Judge Hines on "The Northwestern Conspiracy" deals with the operations on the lakes, and tells of the capture and execution of John Y. Beall. Thomas Canebrake has a review of Tennyson's latest poem, which is both appropriative and suggestive. The Editor's Table has an article on Henry Ward Beecher, and one on Mr. Cable and the negro. Danshe Dandridge. William H. Hayne and Charles J. O'Malley have each a poem suitable to the season. Mr. O'Malley's "To a Mocking-bird in April' is worthy To a Mocking-bird in April" is worthy Magazine of American History.

The Mayazine of American History for April opens with the critical, racy contribution of D. Benjamin E, Martin, the well-known magazinist on "The Trans ition Period of the American Press," culty decided to catarrhal in all inwhich period the intelligent reader need not be told was about the beginning of this sentury. It is followed by the vigorous and well-told story of "Governor Spotswood's Horseshoe Campaign, 1716, spotswood's Horseshoe Camp

The Century. The opening article of the April Gentury is also the beginning of the series of troduction to which was printed in the March number-the text being by Mrs. March number—the text being by Mrs.

M. G. vau Rensealaer and the illustrations by Joseph Pennell. Upon this work Mr. Pennell has been engaged for many months, and the illustrations printed in this article on the "Mother Church of England," as Mrs. van Rensealaer characterizes Canterbury, show a union of architectural faithfulness and picturesque interest unusual in drawings of such subjects. Mr. Joel Chandler Harris is the author of a story in this number entitled "Little Compton," the scene of which is laid in Georgia, before, during, and at the close of the war. The illustrations, by Mr. A B. Frost, include a striking view of "Major Jimmy Bass, surrounding the Enemy." The "Life of Lincoln" is this month devoted to "The Territorial Experiment" (that is to say, the Kansas difficulties.) The sixth installment of Mr. Stockton's "Hundredth Man" is characterized by two popular topics, the "boycott" and "love." Mr. Lathrop contributes an article on "Some Portraits of Hawthorne," apropos of the photograph by Mayall of London. Dr. Edward Eggleston continues his series of papers on colonial history, by an article on "Church and Mesting House before the Revolution," the illustrations of which include a number of the most curious and representative church buildings, of M. G. van Rensselaer and the illustra-insight into the character of Lincoln and prophetic view of a reconciled union of the sections; "The Injustice of Socialism" attacking the Socialistic of principle of recompense; and "English as She is Taught," pointing the moral of Mr. Clemens paper. There Mr. Clemens' paper. There is also a defense by Gustav Koerner of General Snields against the characterization of him by the authors of "The Life of Lin coln" in the January number. The coin in the January number. The poetry includes some new names and consists of; "Love Song," by Amelie Rives; "For I Know that my Redeemer Liveth," by Solomon Solfs-Cohen; "The Enchantress," by Minna Irving; "Sone Walls," by June M.
